If you could teach just one thing to all the people at your organization, what would that be and what in your view is the best way to teach it?

Never stop learning and always be prepared to embrace change is what I will teach people in my organisation. It is important to understand and appreciate the past. But it is more important that we manage the present and shape the future. With our businesses becoming more global, there is an unprecedented need to make mental shifts and adapt to a new eco-system. The best way to teach this is only through repeated communication to everyone in the organisation and more importantly – walk the talk. As Mahatma Gandhi said – Be the change you wish to see in the (your) world.
