SC backs UCC to settle personal law conflicts

BHAVINI MISHRA
New Delhi, 10 March

The Supreme Court on Tuesday observed that the introduction of a Uniform Civil Code (UCC) may be the most effective way to address conflicts arising from the operation of different personal laws.

The court was hearing a petition alleging that certain provisions of Muslim personal law infringe the rights of women.

A Bench comprising Chief Justice of India Surya Kant, Justice Joyymaha Bagchi, and Justice R Mahadevan indicated that the question of reforming personal laws would be better addressed through legislation rather than judicial intervention. Justice Bagchi remarked that striking down personal law provisions without an alternative statutory framework could create legal uncertainty. According to him, a comprehensive law enacted by Parliament would be better suited to resolve such issues.

"Declaring personal laws void would leave a vacuum. It would be more appropriate for the legislature to step in and enact a Uniform Civil Code," he said, noting that the Court had earlier also recommended the idea. Referring to aspects of Muslim personal law, he observed that questions concerning divorce or bigamy involve complex legal consequences that cannot be easily invalidated through judicial orders.

The Chief Justice concurred with the view, stating that a uniform code could provide a consistent solution.

During the hearing, the Bench also questioned the petitioners regarding their challenge to the Muslim Personal Law (Shariat) Application Act, 1937, which they

The apex court was hearing a petition alleging that certain provisions of Muslim personal law infringe on the rights of women. The top court said UCC could be the way out claim discriminates against Muslim women, particularly in matters of succession. The Court pointed out that if the 1937 Act were struck down, it could leave a legal void regarding the applicable rules of succession.

"If the 1937 Act is set aside, what will govern the field? What fills that vacuum?" the CJ asked.

Senior Advocate Prashant Bhushan, appearing for the petitioners, argued that the Sharia-based framework provides women with only half the inheritance share of men. He suggested that if the 1937 Act were invalidated, the Indian Succession Act could apply instead, which grants equal inheritance rights to men and women.

However, Justice Bagchi questioned whether, in the absence of the statute, Muslim succession would continue to be governed by uncodified personal law under Article 372 of the Constitution, which preserves pre-existing laws.

The Chief Justice also cautioned against judicial steps that could inadvertently reduce existing entitlements available to Muslim women.

"In our eagerness to bring reforms, we must be careful that women are not left with fewer protections than they currently have. If the 1937 Act goes, what replaces it is the real question," he said.

Bhushan maintained that inheritance is a matter of civil rights and cannot be considered an essential religious practice protected under Article 25 of the Constitution. He further argued that Muslim women should enjoy the same inheritance rights as Muslim men.

The Bench, however, indicated that the matter may require legislative action and suggested that the petitioners consider revising their plea to propose workable alternatives.

"What ultimately matters is that if a section of Indian women is being denied their rights, those rights must be restored. You may consider amending your petition and placing alternative solutions before the Court," the Chief Justice said.

CBSE orders review after QR code 'rickroll'

Board says Class 12 Maths question paper was genuine, security intact

AUHONA MUKHERJEE
New Delhi, 10 March

The Central Board of Secondary Education (CBSE) said on Tuesday that it was undertaking a serious review of its processes to ensure that the security of examination papers remained intact after a QR code "rickrolling" incident went viral on social media.

On March 9, students appearing for the Class 12 Mathematics board examination noticed that the QR code printed on some question papers redirected to a meme, raising questions about the authenticity of the paper.

CBSE clarified that the question papers were genuine and secure.

"It is hereby confirmed by the Board that the question papers are genuine. The security of the question papers remains uncompromised," the Board said in a public statement.

"While the concern about the veracity of the question papers has been put to rest, the matter has been viewed seriously and necessary steps are being taken by the Board to ensure that such issues are not repeated in the future,"

Rick Astley in the 1987 music video of "Never Gonna Give You Up," the song that is part of a viral prank, popularly referred to as 'rickrolling' the statement added. The QR codes printed on CBSE papers are typically intended as a security and authentication feature to verify the authenticity of examination materials.

During the Class 12 Mathematics board examination held on March 9, some students reported that a QR code printed on the question paper appeared

Chapter on 'judicial graft': NCERT issues public apology, says book withdrawn

The NCERT issued a public apology on Tuesday for including a chapter on judicial corruption in a recent book that had earned the Supreme Court's ire, and said the entire textbook had been withdrawn.

The social science textbook for Class 8 stated that corruption, a massive backlog of cases and the lack of an adequate number of judges are among the challenges faced by the judicial system.

CJI Kant strongly objected to a chapter on judicial corruption in the NCERT's Class 8 curriculum, saying nobody on earth would be allowed to defame the judiciary and taint its integrity. The Supreme Court imposed a "complete blanket ban" on any further publication, reprinting or digital dissemination of the NCERT's Class 8 social science book as it contains "offending" content on corruption in the judiciary, saying a gunshot has been fired and the institution is bleeding.

Restaurants consider raising prices by 20-30% amid LPG shortage

AKSHARA SRIVASTAVA
New Delhi, 10 March

Eating out is likely to get more expensive as input costs rise due to oil price volatility and restaurants pass down the cost to consumers, even as they deal with an immediate challenge of shortage of commercial LPG cylinders required for keeping their kitchens going.

Several restaurants are preparing to raise prices by 20-30 per cent by next month, earlier than the typical cycle of price hikes that takes place in June-July, said industry executives. "Restaurants anyway revise prices around July, but with the current crisis, we may undertake these hikes as early as April," Sagar Daryani, co-founder and chief executive officer at Wow! Momo told Business Standard.

India's hospitality industry is a significant consumer of commercial LPG. Prices of commercial LPG cylinders were hiked by ₹115 earlier this month, reaching ₹1,883 per cylinder in places like Delhi, following the rise in global fuel costs due to disruption in West Asia. The impact of rising raw material costs is unlikely to be fully absorbed by the industry, and hence be passed on to consumers.

Restaurants are preparing for a deeper hit, with packaging material costs expected to go up as well, said market watchers.

"We still have old packaging remaining, but once that is exhausted we will have to pay more for new packaging material which will be more expensive. If we are not shut by then, we will have to raise prices for customers," said Puneet Kohli, director of Sita Ram Diwan Chand.

While alternatives such as electric or induction-based cooking are gradually emerging, they are not yet viable for most commercial kitchens that rely on high-intensity, fast-paced cooking methods typical of Indian cuisine.

"Transitioning to such systems also involves significant cost and infrastructure changes. At present, the industry has no practical alternative," said Pradeep Shetty, vice president, The Federation of Hotels and Restaurant Associations of India (FHRAI).

BCCI announces ₹131 crore reward for India's T20 team

The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) on Tuesday announced a cash reward of ₹131 crore for the entire Indian squad following its third T20 World Cup victory on March 8.

The amount covers 15 players, coaching staff, and other support staff.

As per sources, the players are certain to get lion's share of the reward money while support staff amount will be decided as per hierarchy.

The amount is an increment of ₹6 crore from the ₹125 crore that Rohit Sharma's team was awarded back in 2024.

As per sources, each of the 15 players will receive Rs 6 crore each while remaining Rs 41 crore will be distributed among entire support staff.

"The Board congratulates the players, support staff and selectors once again on this historic achievement and wishes them continued success in the future," BCCI secretary Devajit Saikia said in a statement.

India lifted the prestigious trophy after defeating New Zealand by 96 runs in the final at the Narendra Modi Stadium in Ahmedabad on Sunday, successfully defending the title and becoming the first team in the history of the tournament to retain the ICC Men's T20 World Cup.

With this victory, India also became the first team to win the ICC Men's T20 World Cup three times, further cementing its place among the most successful teams in the history of the format.
