'Handloom sector needs convergence of depts'

AUHONA MUKHERJEE
New Delhi, 18 May

Chairman of the Economic Advisory Council to the Prime Minister (EAC-PM) S Mahendra Dev on Monday noted several problems plaguing the handloom and handicrafts sector, such as raw material supply, marketing constraints and low wages, and called for convergence of departments across the government.

"There are several schemes running across several ministries including the Ministry of Textiles, Ministry of Skill Development, as well as the Ministry of Culture. There may need to be a convergence of these departments and awareness on schemes needs to be enhanced," Dev said at the launch of a survey by the Institute for Human Development (IHD) and the Crafts Council of India (CCI).

The sector requires removal of middlemen, better enhancement of design technology, increased use of institutional credit and the promotion of cluster development, he said.

A survey by the IHD and the CCI estimated that India's handloom and handicraft sector supported nearly 11.3 million workers and 6.5 million establishments nationwide, highlighting its role in manufacturing employment. handloom and handicraft activity. Researchers surveyed 4,659 manufacturing units across rural and urban areas, covering three districts in each state. Units engaged solely in trading were excluded.

Union textile minister Giriraj Singh acknowledged the concerns raised in the report and said the gradual rise in income of handloom and handicraft workers is important. He noted that it is not just the government but also the society's responsibility to help the handicrafts industry.

Singh pointed out that there were 29 weaving service centres across India and currently the textile ministry is focusing on upskilling workers in the Guwahati centre. Weavers' Service Centres (WSCs) are government-run technical institutes across India, designed to support the handloom and textile sectors. They provide skill development, technological upgrades, design assistance, and market linkages.

The ministry is running an initiative through its survey division and its research coincides with the IHD-CCI survey, he said. "In the first phase, we have selected six weaving service centres across five states," said Singh.

Chairman of the EAC-PM S Mahendra Dev said the handloom sector needs middlemen to be removed and better design technology facturing employment.

Across five surveyed states, the sector employed an estimated 6.1 million people through 3.4 million units and contributed around ₹51,445 crore annually in gross value added (GVA). The report also found widespread informality, with most units operating on a small, home-based scale and reporting declining production over the past decade.

The findings were based on a primary survey across Assam, Rajasthan, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal, selected for geographical spread and concentration of

ASUSE may be revamped to improve handlooms' data

HIMANSHI BHARDWAJ
New Delhi, 18 May

Mospi Secretary Saurabh Garg said that over 50 per cent of all Geographical Indications belong to the handloom and handicraft sector

The Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation (Mospi) is willing to incorporate sector-specific suggestions to improve its Annual Survey of Unincorporated Sector Enterprises (ASUSE) to generate more granular and actionable data for the handloom and handicraft sector, said Saurabh Garg, secretary, Mospi on Monday.

"We would be very happy to work and get suggestions on how we can improve our annual survey to get the kind of data that is required to improve decision-making in the area specific to handlooms and handicrafts," Garg said addressing at an event organised by the Crafts Council of India (CCI) and the Institute for Human Development (IHD).

Garg underlined the scale of the survey infrastructure that Mospi brings to the table, noting that the ministry's surveys routinely cover sample sizes of between 100,000 and 500,000 respondents, adding that data-driven decision-making was increasingly being recognised as central to policy.

Garg situated the handloom and handicraft sector at the intersection of two critical policy concerns—the informal economy and the knowledge economy.

"If we look at skill-based artisanal knowledge, I think it's the handloom and handicraft sector which encompasses that," he said, arguing that this dual character made the sector a priority area for measurement under the government's Viksit Bharat 2047 framework. Garg noted that more than 455 craft categories have been identified and listed, and that over 50 per cent of all Geographical Indications issued in India belong to the handloom and handicraft sector — a figure he described as testament to the knowledge base embedded in the sector.

Referring to the presence of women workers in the sector, he said the issue makes it all the more important to ensure access to credit, markets and skilling.

Garg also pointed to the upcoming Economic Census as another opportunity to expand the data landscape for the sector.

The ministry's outreach comes against the backdrop of a comprehensive survey of the sector conducted by CCI and IHD covering 15 districts across five states.

The survey found that handloom and handicraft establishments account for roughly 42 per cent of all manufacturing establishments in the surveyed states, yet the sector's average annual gross value added per worker stands at only around ₹84,000, or approximately ₹270 per day—well below the prescribed minimum wage.

The combined workforce in the sector is estimated at around 11.3 million workers across 6.5 million establishments.

COMBINED WORKFORCE IN THE SECTOR IS AT AROUND 11.3 MILLION WORKERS ACROSS 6.5 MILLION ESTABLISHMENTS
